BASIC nations seek 'equal treatment'

Tibetan activists perform a street play demanding climate action at Meledang on Tuesday, even as the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change is under way in Bonn

Want Access To Finance, Technology

Viskha.Mohan@timesgroup.com

Bonn: Brazil, South Africa, India and China, or BASIC as they are collectively called, have resolved to take up all critical issues, including access to finance and technology during the remaining days of the ongoing UN climate conference (COP23) so that they can prepare the ground for implementation of the Paris Agreement.

These issues were very much on the table when senior representatives/ministers of the group of four nations had their first joint meeting here on Monday where they underlined that the issues of pre-2020 actions must be given "equal treatment at COP23" — a demand that has, so far, not been addressed despite repeated calls by developing countries for its inclusion in the agenda of the current conference. "Ministers look forward to an outcome in COP23 that gives clarity in the design of the facilitative dialogue in 2018," said a joint statement by the BASIC nations. It clearly underlined that "developed countries must take the lead towards closing the ambition gap so as to avoid transferring the burden to developing countries from the pre-2020 to the post-2020 period". The pre-2020 actions are mandated only for rich nations under the Kyoto Protocol whereas the post-2020 action under the Paris Agreement are meant for all countries as per their voluntarily stated targets for climate action, stated in the global deal adopted in Paris in December, 2015. The articulation is expected to dominate the high-level segment which begins on Wednesday. It is expected that German Chancellor Angela Merkel and French President Emmanuel Macron will try to signal a political way forward when they speak about a collective stand of developed countries towards implementation of the Paris Agreement taking on board concerns of developing countries. Clarifying what India sought from the developing world, environment secretary C R Mishra said, "Those (issues) are access to finance, technology and capacity building...all aligned with the Paris Agreement". He represented India at the BASIC meeting.

An Indian 'king' of 2k sqkm unclaimed African land

Yeshika.Budhwar @timesgroup.com

Dehradun: Suyash Dixit, a 24-year-old businessman from India, has proclaimed himself 'king' of a 2,000-sq-km area between Egypt and Sudan, which is the largest unclaimed habitable territory in the world. What is more, his online petition to the United Nations seeking recognition of his claim has found 800 supporters, and counting. Dixit, CEO of a tech firm, was travelling to Cairo for a software developers' meet at the beginning of November when he read about Bir Tawil, a large stretch of territory between the two countries. Because of a complicated colonial-era border demarcation history, the swathe, which has no permanent residents, is arid and remote. It has therefore not been claimed by either country since 1902. This has led to adventurers and explorers staking ownership of it, although international recognition for such claims has not been forthcoming. "I took a connecting flight from Cairo to Abu Simbel on November 4 after the conference, and travelled in a rented car for six hours through the desert to reach Bir Tawil. There is no road, but it was not a difficult trip, although I was afraid of being abducted by terrorists. There, I realised nobody was bothered about it, so I decided to claim it for myself. I planted sunflower seeds there, which is a traditional way to claim ownership of land," Dixit said. Dixit has even designed a flag for the 'Kingdom of Dixit', and planted it at Bir Tawil. "After returning, I wrote an online petition to the UN informing them about my claim, and requesting recognition, although I am not very optimistic that they will reply. However, in just a day's time, I have received support from more than 800 people for my claim, so it might just happen," he said.

Suyash Dixit has even designed a flag for the 'Kingdom of Dixit', and planted it at Bir Tawil
