Desi advanced surveillance drone to be unveiled next wk

Flight-Test Of Weaponised Drone Soon

Rajat.Pandit@timesgroup.com

The Tapas-BH can operate at altitudes up to 28,000-feet with an endurance of over 18 hours

New Delhi: India's first indigenous advanced unmanned aerial vehicle (UAV) for strategic reconnaissance and surveillance will make its public debut next week, while another home-grown weaponised drone is also slated to undertake its first flight test by June-July.

The Tapas-BH (tactical aerial platform for advanced surveillance-beyond horizon) drone, developed by DRDO with over 180 flights clocked till now, will live-stream the aerial and static display of different aircraft during the Aero-India show at Bengaluru. "Tapas-BH will showcase its capabilities, which includes operating at altitudes up to 28,000-feet with an endurance of over 18 hours.

The medium-altitude long-endurance (MALE) is DRDO's solution for ISTAR (intelligence, surveillance, target acquisition and reconnaissance) requirements of the Army, IAF and Navy," a defence ministry official said on Thursday.

The armed drone called Archer-NG (next generation), which can carry 300 kg of weapons including smart anti airfield weapons (SAAWs) and anti-tank guided missiles, in turn, will be flight-tested for the first time by June-July, sources said. The Tapas-BH drone, earlier called Rustom-2, has a maximum speed of 225 kmph with a 20.6-metre wing span and "a command range" of 1,600-km with satellite-based communication. "The UAV, also capable of night-flying, is now getting ready for formal user-trial evaluation by the armed forces. It can thereafter go for production in large numbers by Hindustan Aeronautics Ltd, Bharat Electronics and others," a source said.

How B'wood continues to be on the write track

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

Deepti Naval

Amrita Rao and RJ Anmol

Bollywood is on the 'write' track nowadays. And at the Times Litfest 2023, a bunch of its best creative talents will share their work at Siri Fort. Prominent among them is director actor Deepti Naval.

Naval, known for her sensitive and nuanced acting, has penned A Country Called Childhood, which, among other things, talks about her growing up in Amritsar and her mother Naval put out a small extract from the (then forthcoming) book on her Facebook page last August.

She posted, "My mother was a beautiful woman, the quintessence of good looks, beauty and grace. Even today when people see her B&W photograph atop the piano in my home, they ask: 'Which old film star is this?' 'That's my Mama', I say. 'Wow! She looks like a celebrity!' I look deep into that beautiful serene face and my entire childhood floats in front of my eyes. 'Yes, she was a celebrity... she was the star in my life!'"

Naval, who studied in New York, also writes poetry and short stories. Lamha Lamha and The Mad Tibetan are two of her well-known books.

Amrita Rao (Main Hoon Na and Vivah) and her husband RJ Anmol have authored Couple of Things, a book about their journey together. Juhi Chaturvedi, the acclaimed writer of Vicky Donor and Piku, and writer-director Ashwiny Iyer Tiwary (Nil Battey Sannata and Panga) will share a session at the Times Litfest.

Renowned classical dancer Mallika Sarabhai, who recently penned her memoirs, In Free Fall, will also be there. Old-timers would recall she made a much-publicised Bollywood debut in Prakash Mehra's Himalay Se Ooncha (1975). She has also acted in Basu Chatterjee's Sheesha.

In the distant past, Hindi film stars or top directors avoided writing memoirs. Balraj Sahni was an exception. Apart from penning his autobiography, he also wrote books on his travels to Russia and Pakistan. So did Marathi and Hindi film actress Hansa Wadkar, whose candid life story, Sangtye Aika, formed the basis of Shyam Benegal's film, Bhumika.

In 2007, Dev Anand published his autobiography, Romancing with Life. Well-written and utterly truthful, the book was well-received. The same year, Vyjayanthimala's memoirs, Bonding, was released. In the past decade and half, several other actors and directors such as Prem Chopra, Naseeruddin Shah, Rahul Rawail, Anu Agarwal, Anupam Kher, Kabir Bedi, to name a few, have followed suit. On latest evidence, the welcome trend continues.

The Times Litfest Delhi, presented by Rajnigandha, is being held on February 11 & 12, at Siri Fort Auditorium, August Kranti Marg. Entry is free. Guests to enter venue through gate numbers 2 and 4. Details available at

CAPITAL CHRONICLES

As a city, Delhi has always blended continuity with change. Several women writers, who have mapped this process through fiction and non-fiction, will grace the Times Litfest. Sahitya Akademi award recipient Mridula Garg's memoirs, Ve Nayab Auratein (Those Extraordinary Women) are filled with women who made a mark in the city. Historian Swapna Liddle's book, The Broken Script, offers a taste of early 19th-century Delhi after the East India Company took charge. Prominent literary critic and historian Rakshanda Jalil's book, Invisible City, evocatively records the city's hidden monuments. Rana Safvi has authored several books on Delhi, including the moving Where Stones Speak.

'102 people killed in jallikattu since 2017'

Nagpur: Jallikattu events have killed 102 people and 20 bulls since 2017, says a first-of-its-kind investigative report that could be another red rag for the bull-taming sport's opponents, reports Manka Behl.

According to 'Jallikattu Cult – Politics, Facts, Killings & Covid Deaths' by non-profit organisation Elsa Foundation, the human deaths included 81 spectators and passers-by, and 21 bull-tamers. A large number of schoolchildren also lost their lives.

The report, which captures information from the ground and news reports since 2017, highlighted the disturbing reality of the bull-taming sport held in Tamil Nadu.

In a landmark judgment in 2014, the Supreme Court had banned the sport. However, in 2017, Tamil Nadu passed a state-level amendment to the central Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (PCA) Act, permitting jallikattu as "being intrinsic to Tamil culture".
