Group Of Good Samaritans Goes About Building Bridges, Earning Trust – One Meal At A Time

CHANGE Begins Here

Ridhima Gupta
@timesofindia.com

Whether it's braving the harsh winter or battling torrential rain, wading through knee-deep water to rescue stranded souls or delivering meals to the hungry, Robinhood Army (RHA), a group of good Samaritans, goes that extra mile and even beyond to help the needy. Driven by passion and a deep sense of responsibility, this non-profit, volunteer-based group embodies heroism and social responsibility in its purest forms.

Neel Ghosh, founder, RHA, said the non-profit's name came from the Robinhood legend. "Folklore describes Robinhood as the hero who stole wealth from the rich and distributed it to the poor. Idea behind RHA is based on a similar premise, though we don't take money from anyone, but resources and services from those ready to give and stand by those in need," said Ghosh.

Over the years, RHA, which has completed a decade of service, has taken on new roles, from helping the elderly with medicine deliveries to enrolling slum children into schools, growing beyond its initial mission. It organised plasma donation drives, helped people with disabilities find jobs, and even acted as saviours during natural disasters.

RHA was inspired by Redfood International, an organisation based in Portugal, which collects excess food and gives it to the hungry. Ghosh, who was then working for Zomato in Portugal, came to work with Redfood and thought the concept would be a great way to help those in need in India. "When I first stepped out with our team in India, it felt like I had stepped out of my comfort zone and realised two things: The sheer scale of the need to feed the hungry, and the fulfillment that goes with it," Ghosh said.

While Covid-19 was a moment of reckoning for many, for RHA, it was a defining chapter in their tale. What began as a grassroots movement to feed the hungry transformed into a nationwide lifeline, with volunteers coming together to serve a society in crisis. Covid-19 was the spark that ignited an exponential growth in RHA, turning it into a force that didn't just deliver food, but care, and hope for survival.

'Small Act Of Kindness'
For Sakshi (26), a software developer at an MNC in Delhi, joining RHA during Covid-19 changed her perspective on life. "I remember one of my first drives... It was a reminder of how much impact even a small act of kindness can have," she said. Asad Mohammad (33), a govt employee at a university in Delhi, shares a similar story. He joined RHA during Covid-19 and soon became a familiar face in the neighbourhoods he served. "When I go back to those areas, people don't remember me by my real name. They call me 'Robin Bhaiya,'" he says.

ROBINHOOD ARMY: 'CALL OF DUTY' RELOADED

1,000 active 'Robins' in Delhi alone
406 cities worldwide served by RHA
141 million meals served by RHA

"During one of our drives at NIT Warangal, there was a Robin [as a volunteer is called] who never missed a single event. Only later did we realise that he would walk 5km to the food distribution point, hand out meals, and walk back home," Ghosh said.

The Robin couldn't afford bus fare, but showed up every time. RHA has grown into a global movement with presence in 406 cities worldwide, serving 141 million meals annually to those in need, all without a single rupee of funding from outside.

In Delhi alone, it has more than 10,000 active Robins. However, Ghosh insists RHA's mission goes beyond delivering meals. "Some people criticise us, saying we're just creating a dependency on free food. But we're not food delivery people. The idea is to use a meal as a human connection, a way to build trust. Once that is established, we can start to understand the deeper issues and work towards lasting solutions," Ghosh says.

Building Trust
The act of sharing food is just the first step in what becomes a meaningful relationship between Robins and communities they serve. Ghosh shares an anecdote to illustrate the power of this connection.

"During Covid-19, one of our volunteers in Agra was trying to raise awareness on vaccinations. Initially, people were reluctant. However, when this volunteer wore his green Robinhood Army shirt, they opened up. That shirt was a symbol of trust." RHA isn't just feeding people, its building bridges, earning trust, and creating avenues for change.

RHA plans to grow both, internationally and within local communities.

Their next focus? Education for children and going hyper-local in India. What began as a simple mission to feed the hungry has evolved into something much larger: A movement that nourishes lives, fosters connections, and brings communities together — one meal at a time.

"I remember one of my first drives. We were able to get an oxygen cylinder to a family that was in desperate need. That moment stayed with me."

Cop reunites with vendor who gave free veggies 14 years ago

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

Bhopal: Here's a reunion that reads like a web-series plot. Gwalior DSP Santosh Patel sought out a vegetable vendor in Bhopal, Salman Khan, who was kind to him when he was a struggler 14 years ago, rekindling a warmth that stood the test of space and time.

When the police vehicle halted next to his cart in the Apsara Talkies area, Khan became nervous but his anxiety disappeared as he instantly recognized Patel.

The DSP recalled that he often ran out of money when he was an engineering student and then a PSC aspirant from 2009 to 2013, and he would approach Khan. The vegetable vendor never hesitated. He always offered him tomatoes and brinjal for free. Neither of them forgot the shared smile.

Patel, who is posted in Gwalior, shared the heartwarming video on social media. "Salman understood my situation and would give me vegetables without charge. Meeting him again after so many years was an overwhelming moment for both of us. Forgetting someone who supported you in hard times is a sin. A person should never be ungrateful," Patel posted. In the video, the two men laugh as Salman recalls the old days. Patel also mentioned how Salman would always set aside vegetables for him, even while closing shop.

Salman was thrilled at reconnecting with his old friend. "I lost his number, but I always followed his videos," Salman said.

Attacker caught by Chennai hosp staff while trying to flee

From P1

This happened amid growing demands by doctors across India for better protection and legal safeguards against violence, especially after the rape-murder of a resident doctor in Kolkata's RG Kar Medical College on Aug 9.

Jaganathan's attacker, identified as M Vignesh, was caught by hospital staff while attempting to flee. The automobile engineering diploma-holder was later remanded in judicial custody.

Police said his mother Prema Manoharan was an advanced-stage cancer patient who had received six rounds of chemotherapy and palliative care at the hospital. Her condition worsened at home three days ago.

According to Parthasarathy, the attacker had visited the hospital a day before the attack, where he quarrelled with oncologist Jaganathan.

On Wednesday, Vignesh took an outpatient slip, waited for his turn and once inside the doctor's consultation room, locked the door and launched a vicious attack with a kitchen knife. He discarded the blood-stained knife on the hospital premises and attempted to escape.

Opposition parties condemned the assault, while criticising the DMK-led govt's handling of law and order in the state and its "failure" in protecting doctors in medical facilities.

In response, deputy CM Udhayanidhi Stalin visited the hospital and assured its staff and the medical community that the govt would take stringent action against the attacker.

Chennai police commissioner A Arun also visited the hospital and announced that security would be increased.

State health minister Ma Subramanian reaffirmed the govt's commitment to safety, noting recent measures to improve hospital security such as the installation of CCTV cameras at over 2,000 primary health centres across Tamil Nadu in recent months.
